

FLORIDA IS DIGGING ITSELF OUT OF RUINS

GALE CLAIMS 27 LIVES AND MANY INJURED

ACROSS ISLANDS OF CARIBBEAN
LIES TRAIL OF DEATH
AFTER STORM

100-MILE SWATH OF DESTRUCTION CARRIED BY THE HURRICANE

(By United Press)

Today—the second anniversary of the disastrous hurricane that struck Florida in 1926—found that state slowly digging itself out of the ruins of the present storm which apparently has claimed 27 lives and jammed all hospitals with injured.

Back across the islands of the Caribbean there lies a 100-mile swath of death and destruction out of which a courageous people are rising to rebuild their homes and recoup their fortunes.

MANY DEAD IN OKEECHOBEE DISTRICT

Miami, Fla., Sept. 18.—(U.P.)—Five hundred persons are fleeing out of the Everglades today before the flood waters of Lake Okeechobee which have inundated the lowlands of central Florida.

Belleville, Pahokee and Canal Point, communities near the lake, were reported to be almost entirely covered with water, residents of those towns are making their way toward West Palm Beach.

Reports reached here of possible heavy loss of life in the Lake Okeechobee district.

Two doctors on relief work in the hurricane area estimated today that 50 white persons and 75 negroes lost their lives when the storm struck Lake Okeechobee.

If their information was correct, the death toll may reach 200.

Alexander Orr, at storm relief headquarters, said he received a report that 12 persons were dead at Bell Glade, a small town on the southeastern rim of Great lakes. The casualty list was reported at 30. All efforts to verify this report or one that 24 had been drowned at Okeechobee, city on the northern edge of the lake, were unsuccessful.

The Everglades are south of Bell Glade, near Pahokee, Canal Point and other small towns were reported badly flooded. Special relief measures for the area were taken by the Red Cross as refugees arrived. Bread, milk, water, coffee and blankets, cots and medical supplies are being rushed from here north.

Dr. A. W. Ziebold, of Miami, in charge of Red Cross field work in this district established headquarters at Lakewood.

60 MILE GALE RAGED IN GEORGIA

Dispatches from Atlanta today said all wires were down to points on the Georgia coast. The last word from the United Press correspondent at Savannah came shortly after midnight when he said a 60-mile gale was blowing.

Many agencies with headquarters in the United States organized relief on a large scale for the combined Porto Rico and Florida disaster where havoc was wrought comparable to the Mississippi floods of last year.

The Red Cross was sending food and relief workers to Porto Rico and three additional disaster specialists to Palm Beach. Funds were arriving at Washington from many parts of the country in response to President Coolidge's appeal for the nation to give to the Red Cross.

The army was prepared to furnish troops where martial law was necessary. Two army transports, bound for the canal zone, were ordered to change course and unload their food cargoes at Porto Rico for the 700,000 persons reported starving in that island.

Meanwhile reports of death and damage filtered into the capital from the storm areas.

Red Cross officials said 15 persons had been killed at Okeechobee, Fla., where 150 persons were reported homeless. Okeechobee was flooded by backwater from Lake Okeechobee, the messages said.

Red Cross officials of Palm Beach county sent the following message to Washington last night:

"West Palm Beach fully three-fourths of homes damaged. Large portion totally wrecked. Practically every business house gutted or totally demolished. Barometric readings and wind velocity ten percent greater than Miami storm of 1926. Damages proportionately greater. Loss of life at this time undetermined."

appeals for aid

Washington, Sept. 18.—(U.P.)—The hurricane that swept through the West Indies last week rushed with diminished force through Georgia and South Carolina today, with expectations that it would pass over the Atlantic ocean north of Cape Hatteras, N. C., and spend its final force endangering steamer lanes.

High winds sucked from all sides to its center, however, were expected to be of gale force all along the Atlantic coast as far north as Boston.

Temperatures dropped in the east coast states this morning. Torrential rains fell in Florida and part of the Carolinas and Georgia. Heavy rain fall was predicted within the next 24 hours east of the Appalachians as far north as New Jersey and southeastern Pennsylvania.

Eleven inches of rain fell at Savannah, Ga., when the hurricane approached there last night.

But the terrific winds that caused such havoc when the hurricane struck Porto Rico and Florida had abated. The highest wind velocity reported to the weather bureau this forenoon was 48 miles an hour.

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 18.—(U.P.)—Two births and a death occurred here during the height of the hurricane.

Mrs. Henry Parris, an elderly woman who had been ill for some time died in her room at the Pennsylvania hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Jentle became the parents of a girl, and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. McCann of a boy.

Business men picked their way, carefully through streets strewn with broken glass, collapsed masonry and a tangle of wires, to reach their offices or stores.

Yesterday many went breakfastless as light, power, water and gas service remained disrupted. Lunch stands and restaurants were in operation in a few hours however, charging the same prices as before the storm.

Stores sold raincoats and needed garments from their stocks at cost. All turned a cheerful countenance.

Governor Smith Enters the West to Open Campaign at Omaha for the Farmers' Votes

OPTIMISTIC REPORTS FROM WISCONSIN

ADMITTED STRENGTH BECAUSE
GOVERNOR SMITH'S WET
STAND

CLAIM SMITH SENTIMENT IN MINNESOTA MAY MAKE
STATE DOUBTFUL

By THOMAS STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Aboard Governor Smith's Special Train, Enroute to Omaha, Sept. 18.—

Governor Alfred E. Smith entered the enemy territory beyond the Mississippi today to open his campaign in a speech at Omaha tonight for the farm vote.

Optimistic reports from Wisconsin where Smith has considerable admitted strength because of his wet stand, and from Minnesota, usually a strong republican state, were brought the candidate by Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York who boarded the special train at Chicago last night.

Wagner assured Smith there is no doubt he will carry Wisconsin and that he had received reports of amazing and unexpected Smith sentiment in Minnesota which places the state in the doubtful column. The large German vote in those states is swinging to Smith, Wagner said.

The democratic candidate entered the west with an enthusiastic welcome in the yards at West Chicago. A crowd of several hundred persons thronged about the train cheering for "Al" and lighted their boisterous reception with red flares.

This was a replica, on a large scale, of similar impromptu receptions in Cleveland, Toledo and Elkhart, Ind.

New York, Sept. 18.—(U.P.)—Governor Alfred E. Smith's address in Omaha tonight will be broadcast by a network of 31 stations of the National Broadcasting company, extending from coast to coast. Smith address will begin at 11 p. m. eastern daylight time

(9 p. m. Brainerd time) and is the first broadcast speech of the candidate's present speaking tour.

WEAF will head the N. B. C. network which will "sign off" from the radio industries banquet at the Hotel Astor promptly at 11 p. m., for the Omaha speech.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 18.—(U.P.)—Gov. Alfred E. Smith took off his brown derby and waved the west a New York welcome here today.

Omaha, in the heart of the farm country to which Smith will appeal, waved back and gave the democratic candidate a characteristic "Howdy, Stranger." Throngs greeted him at the station, a crowd curious and eager to see this man who arose from the east side of New York.

Smith has seen this city before but never like he saw it today. Farnam street, the principal thoroughfare, was thronged with countless persons who cheered wildly as the governor and his party drove by.

Smith stopped here in 1908 and 1920, returning from the democratic national conventions in Denver and San Francisco.

As his train came to a stop a band at Union station started playing "Sonny" and a great cheer went up. It was 10 minutes before the governor and his party could emerge through the dense pack of humanity.

With his farm speech here tonight, he will open a campaign to win farm votes in this and other surrounding agricultural states, and will also appeal for that independent vote which flocked to the La Follette banner in 1924.

The democratic candidate was to head a parade through the city, and later visit the stockyards. Mrs. Smith and her daughter, Mrs. John A. Warner, together with other women in the party, were to be guests at a luncheon tendered by Omaha women democratic workers. Gov. Smith was expected to say a few words at this affair.

The special campaign train passed last night through Iowa, the state of Herbert Hoover's birthplace, and the democratic candidate received an enthusiastic welcome at Clinton shortly before midnight from a crowd which had waited for a long time.

Smith had retired but pulled an overcoat over his pajamas and went to the back platform.

GIVES SPEECH AT NEWARK LAST NIGHT

URGES CONTINUED PROSPERITY
UNDER REPUBLICAN PROTECTIVE TARIFF

IMMIGRATION IS ANNOUNCED

BY PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Newark, N. J., Sept. 18.—(U.P.)—Herbert Hoover laid down his program for helping labor in a speech delivered here last night opening his campaign for the doubtful east.

Continued prosperity under a republican protective tariff, stabilization of employment by seasonal distribution of construction of public works, and restrictions against excessive injunctions were promised by the republican presidential candidate.

Hoover also urged continuance of restricted immigration with only such modifications as are necessary to relieve hardships against families; freedom in collective bargaining; and measures for increasing efficiency to bring about more perfect living conditions.

We can build toward perfection only about more perfect living conditions.

We can build toward perfection only upon a foundation of prosperity," the candidate said.

"Education, prohibition, invention, scientific discovery, increase in skill in managers and employees have contributed to magnificent progress."

But now the immediate problem is furnishing a job for every man who wants to work, he added. He denied there is any widespread unemployment. He admitted there are depressions in the textile and bituminous coal industries which must be relieved with all the energy the government can afford. During the last two months, however, he said, there has been a higher record of production and consumption of goods than during corresponding months of any previous year.

He said a high degree of employment could be maintained by continuing republican policies and carrying out his program.

The nominee devoted one sentence to the problem of using injunctions in labor disputes, saying: "It is necessary to impose restrictions on the excessive use of injunctions." He likewise spent one sentence on the contractual relations between employers, saying: "The position of the republican party is in positive support of free collective bargaining."

Hoover said he was quite satisfied generally with the present situation. "We have had a far longer period of stability in industry and commerce and a far greater security of employment than ever before in our history," he said. "We have the highest ingenuity and efficiency in the operation of our individual industries. We are exporting more goods abroad than ever in our history."

The theme of his program was summed up by the nominee as follows:

"Our economic system has abuses; it has grave faults in its operation. But we can build toward perfection only upon a foundation of prosperity. Poverty is not the cause of progress."

"Enduring national life cannot be built upon the bowed and sweating backs of oppressed and embittered men and women. It must be uplifted and upheld by the willing and eager hands of the whole people. They will uphold it if our economic life be built for the whole people, not for any special groups."

Government inspectors were stationed at the Ranieri home and were checking letters sent in connection with the crime in an effort to trace them back to their source.

Deputy Commissioner of Police John Stege announced he had names of six Mafia extortionists suspected in the kidnaping. Three men already have been arrested. They are Salvatore Mastrisanni, Reynoldo Schiedo and Angelo Pettiti, alleged professional extortionists.

CHICAGO POLICE HAVE FEW CLEWS OF KIDNAPERS

13TH DAY PASSES SINCE ABDUCTION OF 10 YEAR OLD BILLY RANIERI

FATHER RECEIVES THIRD LETTER RENEWING THREATS OF DEATH FOR BOY

Chicago, Sept. 18.—(UP)—On the thirteenth day since the kidnaping of ten-year-old "Billy" Ranieri, police had made little tangible progress toward finding the boy and his abductors.

A. Frank Ranieri, the boy's father, received a third letter, renewing threats of death for the boy, unless the demands of the kidnapers for $15,000 are met.

Government inspectors were stationed at the Ranieri home and were checking letters sent in connection with the crime in an effort to trace them back to their source.

Deputy Commissioner of Police John Stege announced he had names of six Mafia extortionists suspected in the kidnaping. Three men already have been arrested. They are Salvatore Mastrisanni, Reynoldo Schiedo and Angelo Pettiti, alleged professional extortionists.

Physicians declared that the majority of the 98 cases of the disease here had passed into the pre-paralytic stage, which is less fatal than the early period of sickness.

Only four new cases were reported by provincial physicians giving proof to the belief that the epidemic was on the decline.

FILES SUIT FOR 14 CENTS DAMAGES

Springfield, Mo., Sept. 18.—(UP)—Suits for 14 cents damages were filed against the Springfield Traction company here by Elmer G. Wadlow, an attorney, because he and his wife allegedly were charged with two fares for one continuous trip on a street car.

Wadlow said he was quite satisfied generally with the present situation. "We have had a far longer period of stability in industry and commerce and a far greater security of employment than ever before in our history," he said. "We have the highest ingenuity and efficiency in the operation of our individual industries. We are exporting more goods abroad than ever in our history."

The theme of his program was summed up by the nominee as follows:

"Our economic system has abuses; it has grave faults in its operation. But we can build toward perfection only upon a foundation of prosperity. Poverty is not the cause of progress."

"Enduring national life cannot be built upon the bowed and sweating backs of oppressed and embittered men and women. It must be uplifted and upheld by the willing and eager hands of the whole people. They will uphold it if our economic life be built for the whole people, not for any special groups."

GIVES SPEECH AT NEWARK LAST NIGHT

URGES CONTINUED PROSPERITY UNDER REPUBLICAN PROTECTIVE TARIFF

CONTINUED RESTRICTION OF IMMIGRATION IS ANNOUNCED

BY PAUL R. MALLON

(United Press Staff Correspondent) Newark, N. J., Sept. 18.—(UP)—Herbert Hoover laid down his program for helping labor in a speech delivered here last night opening his campaign for the doubtful east.

Continued prosperity under a republican protective tariff, stabilization of employment by seasonal distribution of construction of public works, and restrictions against excessive injunctions were promised by the republican presidential candidate.

Hoover also urged continuance of restricted immigration with only such modifications as are necessary to relieve hardships against families; freedom in collective bargaining; and measures for increasing efficiency to bring about more perfect living conditions.

We can build toward perfection only about more perfect living conditions.

We can build toward perfection only upon a foundation of prosperity," the candidate said.

"Education, prohibition, invention, scientific discovery, increase in skill in managers and employees have contributed to magnificent progress."

But now the immediate problem is furnishing a job for every man who wants to work, he added. He denied there is any widespread unemployment. He admitted there are depressions in the textile and bituminous coal industries which must be relieved with all the energy the government can afford. During the last two months, however, he said, there has been a higher record of production and consumption of goods than during corresponding months of any previous year.

He said a high degree of employment could be maintained by continuing republican policies and carrying out his program.

The nominee devoted one sentence to the problem of using injunctions in labor disputes, saying: "It is necessary to impose restrictions on the excessive use of injunctions." He likewise spent one sentence on the contractual relations between employers, saying: "The position of the republican party is in positive support of free collective bargaining."

Hoover said he was quite satisfied generally with the present situation. "We have had a far longer period of stability in industry and commerce and a far greater security of employment than ever before in our history," he said. "We have the highest ingenuity and efficiency in the operation of our individual industries. We are exporting more goods abroad than ever in our history."

The theme of his program was summed up by the nominee as follows:

EPISCOPAL DIOCESE MEET AT PARKERVILLE

Conference for Clergy and Laymen
in Northern Minnesota
Opens Tomorrow

CONTINUES OVER SUNDAY

Program of Church for the Ensuing Year Will be Outlined

Bishop G. G. Bennett of the Duluth diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church, has announced that he will hold his fall conferences of the diocese at Parkerville on North Long Lake, September 19 to 23 inclusive. These conferences are for both the clergy and laymen of the church in the northern Minnesota district or diocese of the Protestant Episcopal church, and includes about 75 parishes and missions in this territory.

The purpose of the conferences is to outline the work of the church for the ensuing year and to present to both clergy and laymen the program of the church for the entire diocese.

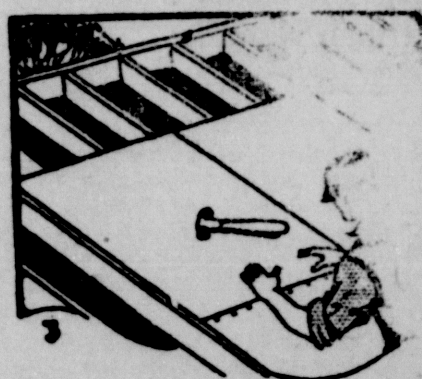

The original plan was announced at the annual clergy conference of the diocese at the sessions held last June in the conference grounds at Cass Lake. This announcement stated that the fall conferences would be held in September at Cass Lake. Immediately following the Indian conference held recently at the conference grounds at Cass Lake, it was decided that the open summer conference buildings and summer chapel could not be used to a great advantage this late in the fall. In deciding upon a suitable place, Bishop Bennett remembered his many visits to Parkerville as a guest of Mrs. F. S. Parker and Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Campbell. About two weeks ago Bishop Bennett asked Mrs. Parker if she could and would entertain both the conferences at Parkerville. Mrs. Parker was happy to be able to invite them and accept the Bishops' suggestion and placed all of her cottages at the disposal of the conferences. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell also offered the use of their large and commodious cottage which was gladly accepted, thus giving the use of 25 separate beds, besides the many other accommodations and advantages.

Mrs. Parkers' cottage with its five separate bed rooms will be the headquarters. The living room of this cottage will be used for a lounge and sitting room. All meals will be served in the large dining room of this cottage which can accommodate 25 at the same time with two tables. The living room and dining room of the Campbell cottage will be used for a chapel and all the services and conferences will be held in these spacious rooms. Mrs. Parker will personally supervise the dining room and Herman Brichacek will have charge of the chapel accommodations and the appointments of all lodgings.

The clergy conference opens Wednesday evening of this week with supper and a service following and closes Friday afternoon. The conference for the laymen opens Saturday morning and closes Sunday afternoon. The conference is held under the direction of the church extension department of the diocese with Bishop Bennett as the leader and all diocesan arrangements under the direction of Rev. E. C. Biller, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, St. Cloud, and all local plans under the direction of R. T. Campbell of Brainerd. It is anticipated that there will be an attendance of 25 at each of the conferences with Bishop Bennett present throughout both conferences.

ers to his labor speech in the armory led him and his advisers to believe they can expect the best from this region.

The big three of the state republican organization—Senator Walter E. Keane, candidate for United States senator—agree in statements to the United Press that Hoover's speech together with other normal developments would help to make continued prosperity the big issue here.

The nominee was very well pleased at his series of receptions as he started out this morning on an automobile tour through Hudson and Passaic counties and an inspection trip to the Newark airport, before lunching at the Elks' club, with Senator Edge and republican leaders. He will leave after lunch to travel across the state by motor to Trenton, where at 5 p. m., E. S. T., he will board a special train to return to Washington.

His busy day yesterday was climaxed by the speech last night to an audience of about 10,000 persons inside the armory, and several thousand more outside.

In his address he promised continued prosperity under a protective tariff which he said would maintain the high American wage scale, continued restrictive immigration, curb on the excessive use of injunctions in labor disputes, and diminution of unemployment by distributing public works construction so as to furnish more jobs in slack times.

He, Mrs. Hoover and their son, Allan, spent last night as guests of Thomas A. Edison and Mrs. Edison at their home in Menlo Park, N. J.

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 18—(UP)—Tens of thousands of factory workers, school children and housewives met Herbert Hoover on his farewell motor tour today through a dozen north New Jersey industrial centers.

In a speech to a large crowd on the steps of the Passaic county court house Hoover expressed his appreciation of the Jersey demonstration.

"I know of no American who has received so fine and courteous greeting as you have given me," the republican presidential nominee said. "It is encouraging and heartening in the task we are undertaking."

Starting immediately after breakfast the nominee rode through Harrison, Kearney, Nutley, Passaic, Garfield, Lodi, Paterson, Hackensack and Clinton.

In every town school children were drawn up along the side walks. Hoover took special interest in them. He ordered his car to drive slowly and sat on the folded top as Col. Charles Lindbergh always does, so they could see him better.

Crowds were so thick that several minor accidents occurred. In Paterson the press car behind Hoover's car ran into a motorcycle policeman who was thrown into the crowd. The motorcycle fell on a woman who was taken to a hospital. On another occasion two motorcycle police ran into each other but neither was hurt.

FACE FUTURE WITH OPTIMISM

THE optimism shown by the Northern Pacific railway company in its survey of business conditions in its territory is reflected all along the line. Trade is on the upgrade in the northwest. The Dispatch is glad to print this resume of railway activities, for it is a well known axiom in Brainerd that if the shops are thriving, then all Brainerd shares in the benefits.

Twelve hundred additional train and engine men have been employed on the Northern Pacific system to handle transportation of the 1928 crop. H. E. Stevens, vice president in charge of operations, said when he returned from an inspection tour of the company's lines.

Employment of this large force of additional men means that in the next four months more than $1,000,000 will be added to the payroll of the company's workers on trains only, in the northwest.

Mr. Stevens said that he observed along the entire system a feeling of optimism among business men, both merchants and manufacturers. Trade is on the upgrade throughout the northwest. One of the major industrial developments along the system is the construction by the Amalgamated Sugar Company at Missoula of a $1,500,000 plant. This plant will be ready to grind this year's beets on October 10. The yield and quality of the beets in this plant's territory are better than was anticipated, Mr. Stevens said, and while the acreage is comparatively small it affords a good start.

Western North Dakota and eastern Montana are harvesting an enormous crop. While the rain has delayed the crop movement to some extent the transportation of the crop is moving smoothly; no congestion at the terminals has developed. Car loadings on the east end of the system are in excess of those of last year, while on the west end they are slightly below. The total car loadings, however, are slightly in excess of those at this time last year.

"The property of the Northern Pacific is in excellent condition physically," Mr. Stevens continued. "All large improvement work is well along toward completion and the maintenance program was practically completed, well in advance of the crop movement."

"The Northern Pacific shops at various points on the system are operating with enlarged forces who, in the last month, have been engaged in conditioning equipment. Much attention has been given to putting not only the cars but the motive power in first-class shape. Our yards at Staples and Dickinson have been enlarged which is facilitating the crop movement. We are going into the full crop movement in better shape this year than ever before. "Farmers are in a good frame of mind and these seem to be a marked tendency to adopt the most modern machinery in farm work."

"With the movement of the crop to eastern markets under way, the car loadings of west-bound freight indicate that the buying power of the territory already is improving."

PAVE NO. 2

THERE has been considerable complaint in Duluth—and Duluthians have reason to complain—about the condition of highway No. 2 over its unpaved section from Carlton to Brainerd. Much of this graveled road is over swampy country and will not stand up under the increasingly heavy traffic that is passing over it. Maintenance is costly and in many places the road is in very poor condition.

Traffic over No. 2 is increasing and it would be real economy to motorists to pave it. Many more people would use it if it were paved. No. 2 also runs westward from Brainerd to Fargo. That, too, should be paved, although the paving of the western end isn't as important to Duluth as the road between here and Brainerd.

From Brainerd to the Twin Cities is paved all the way. From Brainerd to Duluth is gravel and in many places and at many seasons of the year is in poor condition. This is all in Duluth's trade territory. Yet people in the southern part of this territory will drive to the Twin Cities over the pavement, rather than come to Duluth, the shorter distance, over a poor road.

The Twin Cities, and especially Minneapolis, work continuously for paved roads, and they get them. Duluth should work continuously, too. Duluth should start now to work for the paving of highway No. 2 from here to Brainerd, at least, to the end that the project shall be put under way early next season.—Duluth News Tribune.

71 YEARS YOUNG

THIS month John L. Smith, who came to Brainerd in 1880, celebrated his 71st birthday, with a few friends at his cottage, "Council Tree Lodge," Ojibway Park, on Friday the seventh.

The peerless climate, the combination of lake and land at his home, have done wonders in preserving the health of Mr. Smith. He works regularly eight hours, five days a week and is sturdy, rugged, in physique and has a golfer's bronzed complexion. The Dispatch wishes him many more birthdays.

TWO CITIES TO CLEAN UP

THE mayor of Philadelphia has truly said that if there were no drinkers, there would be no bootleggers.

Chicago and Philadelphia are in the public eye. Each has its gang warfare problem wherein the underworld seeks to carry on illicit liquor trade and everything that connects with it, using the machine gun and knife to enforce its edicts.

It is encouraging to see these cities make a start to work in unison and clean up.

IN THE OLD DAYS

IN the old days when liquor was legal and easy to get, it played havoc with the working schedule of many a manufacturing establishment. As a rule, efficiency was marred by absentees. The foreman usually was short of men on Monday and the full crew never got to work until midweek.

At the last meeting of Independent School District No. 51, held last week, the resignation of W. J. Cameron was accepted and his place on the board filled by the appointment of Dr. B. A. Smith to fill the unexpired term.

Millions and not one of the stockholders is that we put $1000 of the Capital stock which is 1000 shares in the safe at the office $1000 each for you. Red Green Stuart shipped out and as fast as it came dividends and pays for itself. It is turned over to you the earnings ought to be $1000 a year at which rate the stock would pay for itself in 5 years or in the words of the $1000 a year of an income in your hands.

In 1893 E. F. Howe, then general superintendent of the Fairmont Creamery Company in Omaha, Neb., wrote a letter to C. C. Dempsey, a creamery employe, promising him $1,000 of stock if he would remain with the company five years. The letter was mislaid. Recently Mrs. Ada Dempsey of Evanston, Ill., his widow, pictured above with her attorney, George L. Schein, found the important communication in the bottom of an old trunk. She asserts that her husband often requested the stock, but never received it, and she has filed suit against the creamery, now a $10,000,000 corporation, asking for $200,000, which Attorney Schein calculated the stock would amount to today with dividends, interest, etc. A portion of the letter is shown.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

Better, better---who has something better?

To stand still is to stagnate. We Americans are not content with what we have; we are always looking for something better. We want better and more wholesome foods. We want newer and better ways of doing things—labor-saving devices, short-cuts. We want better educational facilities, better and more comfortable homes, better working conditions. Betterment is progress. That's why every today is better than every yesterday.

Advertising is a medium of progress. Through advertisements we learn of the newest time and labor-saving machines for home and factory. Advertisements keep us posted on progress in sciences; of the new or improved foods, clothes and the every-day necessities of life.

You have but to look through the advertisements in the newspapers or magazines to find the article you need or want, advertised.

Advertising supplies new ideas, new materials, new methods to a work-a-day world. It helps make today better than yesterday.

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

Better, better---who has something better?

To stand still is to stagnate. We Americans are not content with what we have; we are always looking for something better. We want better and more wholesome foods. We want newer and better ways of doing things—labor-saving devices, short-cuts. We want better educational facilities, better and more comfortable homes, better working conditions. Betterment is progress. That's why every today is better than every yesterday.

Advertising is a medium of progress. Through advertisements we learn of the newest time and labor-saving machines for home and factory. Advertisements keep us posted on progress in sciences; of the new or improved foods, clothes and the every-day necessities of life.

You have but to look through the advertisements in the newspapers or magazines to find the article you need or want, advertised.

Advertising supplies new ideas, new materials, new methods to a work-a-day world. It helps make today better than yesterday.

COACH KASCH LINES UP WARRIORS IN TENTATIVE POSITIONS

MILACA HERE FOR OPENING CLASH OF SEASON SATURDAY

FOUR HOME GAMES ON BRAINERD HIGH SCHOOL GRIDIRON SCHEDULE THIS SEASON

TWO LETTERMEN ARE DROPPED FROM SQUAD BECAUSE OF INELIGIBILITY, 5 RETURNED

Coach Kasch today started lining up his men for the opening gridiron battle here next Saturday afternoon with Milaca, his roster of players showing five lettermen and a score of candidates from last season's second squad.

Shifting of positions to evenly balance Brainerd's hope this season will find a practically complete new team against Milaca Saturday.

Arrangements have been made to play the home football games at the municipal field and in case wetness of the grounds will prevent play an emergency field has been secured.

Local fans are assured of four home games this season regardless of field or weather conditions:

September 22—Milaca at Brainerd.

October 5—Little Falls at Brainerd.

October 12—Staples at Brainerd.

October 20—Aitkin at Brainerd.

Of the seven lettermen back at the start of the practice season two have been dropped from the squad already because of ineligibility. However the following lettermen will be seen in action again: Captain Fuller, Swanson, Goederz, Guin, Art Hautala.

As the team lined up today Lammon will be found at left end. He is one of the smallest men on the team but also one of the hardest tacklers. He is small but takes care of his end whenever runs come his direction. This position was taken care of by Guin last year who has been changed to a back field position. At left tackle Roy Paine seems to have the advantage so far. Paine was on the squad last year and has started out by playing good football this season. This position was taken care of by Greger last year and Paine will have to do much to fill his shoes. At left guard is found Abrahamson. It is not known whether he is a cousin of the famous Abrahamson of Minnesota fame or not. Even though he isn't, Abrahamson has some of the earmarks of a good guard. He is a natural fighter. Last year left guard was taken care of by Joe Greener who was one of the fastest men on the squad.

The center position has caused more worry than any position to date. Fox who was loomed as the probable center was declared ineligible, leaving that position without an experienced person. A search was made on the old squad immediately and Art Hautala was selected and has been coming along as fast as can be expected. Hautala was sub lineman, backfield man last year. Ellison was last year's center and one of the most valuable men on the team. It is hoped that Hautala will make another Ellison at center.

Foster has a slight advantage at right guard position at the present. He has good speed which is essential in playing guard position. This position was held by Hanson on the 1927 team and so Foster has a good season's job to fill the position. At right tackle, Geist is head of his nearest competitor by a slight margin. This position was left vacant by LaCourse and Welliver who were two good tacklers.

Goederz will hold down the right end post where he substituted frequently last year. He will fill the position vacated by Barnes last year. In the quarterback position Leo Dybvick has first call because of his speed and general football ability. This position was taken care of by Wise and Buscher last year. Wise is still in school but has been unable to practice with the squad this year.

At left half is found John Gabiou who would have made a valuable man for the 1927 squad had he been eligible. However this year he has added considerable punch to the backfield. The heady Walter Hautala held this position last year.

The right half is taken care of by Swanson who played this position last year. Captain Fuller will handle the full back call. The two men will be very valuable to the game. Gabiou is at present calling signals from the half back position.

The second eleven men are fast improving and will be used as substitutes. Garvey, left tackle is fast improving his game while Hugh McCaffrey has been coming along fine at end. Kinney is passing the ball. Lien at right guard, Alex Nelson at left, Hoffbauer at right end, and Halvorson has been doing quarterback work in good fashion. Kleveland at half back is showing improvement with Marshall at left half and Bush at full back. Others on the squad in scrimmage are: Mayo, R.

JOURNEY TO THRONE WAS NEARLY BALKED

COCHET WON LAURELS IN 47TH ANNUAL NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIPS PLAY

FRANCIS T. HUNTER WINS MUCH PRAISE FOR FLAMING, CONTESTING SPIRIT

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 18.—Henri Cochet began his reign as king of American tennis today, but his journey to the throne almost met with mishap at the last minute.

While Cochet won the laurels in the forty-seventh annual national singles championships, Francis T. Hunter carried over most of the praise for his flaming spirit which stood off Cochet until the last ditch in the last yesterday.

Accorded only one chance in three of winning before the match, Hunter was within two points and one game of topping Cochet in what would have been the biggest upset of the lawn tennis year only to crumble before the Frenchman's attack in five sets, 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3.

No one expected Hunter, despite his great play against Borotra, Crawford and Lott in the earlier rounds, to carry the attack to Cochet and send the little Frenchman into retreat at the outset of the match.

No one expected Hunter to press the play so relentlessly that France's outstanding player for 1928 would have to stage a desperate rally in the last two sets to win. No one expected Hunter to come as close as two points and one game to victory.

The marvel of it all is that Hunter did these things, and others, with no more stroke equipment than brutal forearm drive plus magnificent courage in the face of odds.

Cochet came out after the intermission between the third and fourth sets determined to crush Hunter as quickly as possible. The Frenchman reeled off four games in a row and soon had a 5-1 lead. He needed only one game to even the match at two sets all. Hunter refused to quit fighting and with one of the gamest rallies on record spurred through four games in succession to even the set at five games all. With the advantage of service, Hunter won the first two points in the eleventh game on a placement and an out by Cochet. Two more points and one more game—that was all Hunter needed.

Directing his attack like a quarterback whose team is behind and with only a few seconds left to play, Cochet won the next four points on a placement, an out by Hunter, a placement and a double fault by Hunter. The twelfth game went to deuce but Cochet won it and the set. Hunter's last chance had passed.

Hunter continued to fight in the fifth set, winning the first two games, but Cochet had the match in his hands now and he battered his way past the American's gallant defense in the next 7 games, winning 6 of them.

Watching the Scoreboard

(By United Press)

Yesterday's Hero—Jim Bottomley, St. Louis Cardinal first baseman, whose home run in the seventh inning with High and Frisch on base, gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 5 to 2 victory over Philadelphia.

Home runs by Mel Ott and Jimmy Welsh and the fine pitching of Carl Hubbell enabled the New York Giants to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates 9 to 2.

Five Boston Braves pitchers were found for nineteen safeties to give the Chicago Cubs a 15 to 5 victory.

Pete Donohue weakened in the eighth inning and allowed the Brooklyn Robins to score five runs and win a 7 to 3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Six costly errors and poor mound work by four St. Louis pitchers enabled the New York Yankees to win a 12 to 2 victory and gain one-half a game in the American league pennant race.

The Washington Senators gained the first division by winning their third straight from the Detroit Tigers by a score of 9 to 2.

Fred Russell bested Ted Lyons in a mound battle and the Boston Red Sox won 6 to 3 from the Chicago White Sox.

Jinxed by Yanks

By QUIN HALL.

DESPITE the fact that the New York Yankees have been able to beat him in most of the start he has made against them, Lefty Grove undoubtedly will turn in one of the best seasons of his career, and if the American League gallop still is in doubt a lot of the burden in the final drive will be put on the shoulders of Connie Mack's star pitcher.

Lefty has been able to chalk up a goodly list of wins during the year which is rapidly coming to a close, and it would be much more massive if he could have been successful in winning more of his starts from the Huggins. It seems that the New York crowd have had a jinx working overtime on Bob this season, and in his defeat column the name of the Yanks stands out like a flapper who still clings to the good old-fashioned cotton stockings.

A peculiar twist in the schedules put the bulk of the games between these two teams early in the season when the Yanks easily were supreme over all the league and originally broke into the game as a southpaw first sacker, who, as a kid, heaved the ball around the infield with so much speed that the players winced whenever he fired a cannot shot at them. That fact marked him as twirling timber. That was back in Grove's youthful days when he was playing town ball at Lonaconing, Md.

His first shot at a professional job came when he was signed by the Martinsburg, W. Va., Club, in the Blue Ridge League. Every time he pitched against the Hagerstown, Md., team he was opposed by the same pitcher. Almost every time young Grove won and the Hagerstown flinger, growing tired of these customary defeats, took matters in his own hands and wrote to Jack Dunn, the famous manager of the Baltimore Club in the International League, advising him to buy his left-handed Nemesis.

Dunn took the tip and during the balance of the season in Baltimore Lefty won twelve games and lost two. That, in itself, noted Grove's future and opened the gates to the Big Top for the southpaw first sacker who had made good on the hill.

And he still is making good on the mound, despite the setbacks he has received at the hands of the Yankees this year. After all, when you come to think of it, who hasn't received setbacks at the hands of the Huggins?

While Cochet won the laurels in the forty-seventh annual national singles championships, Francis T. Hunter carried over most of the praise for his flaming spirit which stood off Cochet until the last ditch in the final set.

Accorded only one chance in three of winning before the match, Hunter was within two points and one game of toppling Cochet in what would have been the biggest upset of the lawn tennis year only to crumble before the Frenchman's attack in five sets, 4-6, 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-3.

No one expected Hunter, despite his great play against Borotra, Crawford and Lott in the earlier rounds, to carry the attack to Cochet and send the little Frenchman into retreat at the outset of the match.

No one expected Hunter to press the play so relentlessly that France's outstanding player for 1928 would have to stage a desperate rally in the last two sets to win. No one expected Hunter to come as close as two points and one game to victory.

The marvel of it all is that Hunter did these things, and others, with no more stroke equipment than brutal forearm drive plus magnificent courage in the face of odds.

Cochet came out after the intermission between the third and fourth sets determined to crush Hunter as quickly as possible. The Frenchman reeled off four games in a row and soon had a 5-1 lead. He needed only one game to even the match at two sets all.

Hunter refused to quit fighting and with one of the gamest rallies on record spurred through four games in succession to even the set at five games all. With the advantage of service, Hunter won the first two points in the eleventh game on a placement and an out by Cochet. Two more points and one more game—that was all Hunter needed.

Directing his attack like a quarterback whose team is behind and with only a few seconds left to play, Cochet won the next four points on a placement, an out by Hunter, a placement and a double fault by Hunter. The twelfth game went to deuce but Cochet won it and the set. Hunter's last chance had passed.

Hunter continued to fight in the fifth set, winning the first two games, but Cochet had the match in his hands now and he battered his way past the American's gallant defense in the next 7 games, winning 6 of them.

Yesterday's Hero—Jim Bottomley, St. Louis Cardinal first baseman, whose home run in the seventh inning with High and Frisch on base, gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 5 to 2 victory over Philadelphia.

Home runs by Mel Ott and Jimmy Welsh and the fine pitching of Carl Hubbell enabled the New York Giants to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates 9 to 2.

Five Boston Braves pitchers were found for nineteen safeties to give the Chicago Cubs a 15 to 5 victory.

Pete Donohue weakened in the eighth inning and allowed the Brooklyn Robins to score five runs and win a 7 to 3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Six costly errors and poor mound work by four St. Louis pitchers enabled the New York Yankees to win a 12 to 2 victory and gain one-half a game in the American league pennant race.

The Washington Senators gained the first division by winning their third straight from the Detroit Tigers by a score of 9 to 2.

Fred Russell bested Ted Lyons in a mound battle and the Boston Red Sox won 6 to 3 from the Chicago White Sox.

REV. M. L. EVERSZ ADDRESSES THE HIGH SCHOOL ON EDUCATION

Education is Ability to Enter Into All Values With Appreciation

Rev. Morris L. Eversz, pastor of the First Methodist church, addressed the students of the high school last Friday noon.

He started in talk on how Freshmen and Sophomores should think of education by quoting several humorous definitions of it. One wag said that education was something he had been exposed to but had not caught. Another said that education is the sum of all he had not been taught.

Said the ultra senior to the verdant freshman, "Do not let your studies interfere with your education."

The definition we were really to think about was this. Education is ability to enter into all values with appreciation and conviction. The word "ability" is derived from the Greek word "dynamite." Ability means something forceful. The words "to enter" mean to penetrate. "All values" mean values of art, architecture, commerce, industry, politics, government, home, religion, etc. Appreciation is made from the word praise, and conviction means to be "dead sure."

The speaker said only two things are sure in this life, mathematics and experience. Mathematics is an exact science, and we know the things we live through.

In the high school young people first learn to think. Thinking is not brooding, dreaming—thinking is creating. The emigrant Polish girl in the Americanization class said the difference between an educated man and an intelligent man was this: the educated man gets his "thinks" from other people, and the intelligent man works his own "thinks."

Rev. Eversz said he wanted us always to think of education in terms of our alma mater, the high school. The fact that people of wealth were leaving their money to private schools, colleges and universities proves that the private schools, colleges and universities make the deeper impression, whereas the Yale report for elementary education of 1925 showed that while the pupils from the high schools came to college better prepared, the pupils from the high schools did the better work. Private school boys and girls are better cared for, wear better clothes, have more money, come from more luxurious homes and have a better literary finish, but the pupils from the high schools have what is better than "finish," they have more pep, enterprise and a spirit to achieve.

Then the speaker also urged us to cooperate and gave humorous illustrations as to how to do it. The real school is the student body. Buildings, teachers, school boards, exist only for them.

He counseled us to seek happiness. Many people mistake happiness for pleasure. If they have pleasures they think they are happy. But happiness consists in being worthy, worthy of God, of the world's Redeemer, of the flag, worthy of home, school, church, religion, government, worthy of youth, etc.

The school listened so intently to Rev. Eversz' address, that few took notes and the Brainonian is indebted to the kind pastor for the points he furnished after his address.

The School House in the City

In the school house in the city
Dwelt a little freshie boy,
He was green as grass and shamrock
And, as usual, very coy.

Was not very fond of study
And his lessons he would shirk
Tho' his teachers warned and scolded
He could not be made to work.

Of the test time, never thinking
He played hockey all he durst.
Never bore in mind, the motto,
"Always think of safety first."

Finally an examination,
Lay before his wide spread eyes,
"Why, oh why did I not think to Prepare first?" were his sad cries.

We all know the end of this boy
For it happens as a rule
They are flogged then taken hold of
And sent sadly home from school.

The football season starts Saturday at 3:00 when Mr. Kasch's warriors open their schedule with a tilt against Milaca here. Mr. Kasch has been working the boys hard getting them into shape for the fight which he promises will be chuck full of surprises and thrills. The team is working under difficulties this year so let's all turn out and loosen up the ol' tonsils in appreciation. What say?

When the Frosh made their first appearance at the court house all the teachers were rather disappointed with them and their foolish fears but the faculty may now rest assured they are quite human. They have already adopted that custom so dear to the hearts of the underclassmen, that of using tea-leads and spitballs in connection with rubber bands. Their unerring aim and deadly precision is far above that of former classes so we have great hopes for the class of '32, but Mr. Kasch and Mrs. Fleming have the eye of Dead Eye Dick himself, so this amusement will no doubt be short lived.

The Hi-Y Service Shield was hung up in the court house assembly Monday night to remind the lower classes of the bigger things in life. The Hi-Y club each year votes on the Senior boy who has done the most for the school and community. Some of the Freshmen boys have already started working for the tag reserved for the class of '32. We wish them luck.

Education

Teacher: Class in Botany stand up. What kind of a bird is a heron?
Pupil: A heron is a small fish, as full of bones as a fine tooth comb.

Teacher: To what genus does the cat belong?

Pupil: The musical genus, they lie around days, and shout around nights.

Teacher: Which is the wisest fowl?

Pupil: The owl, because he hoots at most things.

Teacher: Class in Botany, sit down!

In Latin Vocabulary—Mulier, mulieris,—woman.

Now we see where we get our word "mule."

TWO '28 GRADUATES WIN SCHOLARSHIPS

The scholarships offered last June by the various colleges of Minnesota were awarded during the summer, of the number examined, over five hundred were considered for the scholarships. Brainerd has reason to be exceedingly proud of her part in these examinations, for, as last year, she received two. Donald McNamara, president of the class, ranked number 15 in scholarship, but did not accept the offer as he is attending the University in Los Angeles, Calif. Margaret Dillan, who ranked 34 from the top, is a freshman at Gustavus Adolphus college at St. Peter, Minn. The scholarship, in addition to the honor it brings, carries a cash value of $100 on the tuition at the college attended.

GRIDIRON GOSSIP

The B. H. S. football team received the first setback of the season last week, when it was learned that Fox, a letterman from last year, would be ineligible for the remainder of the semester because of failing to make three subjects last semester. Fox had practically clinched the center position and owing to his size and weight together with his experience, his place in the line will be hard to fill. Hantala has been shifted to center and Foster although usually seen at guard can be called upon to fill the berth in the center of the line.

Coach Kasch is fast rounding the team into shape and this week will be spent perfecting plays and producing a smooth running team to battle with the Milaca eleven, Saturday, here.

Last week, on account of the bad weather, some time was lost for outside practice but on these days chalk talks were substituted and much valuable information was imparted to the players by the coach. The possibility of rain before the Milaca game and the consequent spilling of the field for play is a problem at present. Mr. Kasch and Mr. Cobb spent yesterday morning looking for a suitable one for practice, and decided on the old baseball diamond on South Sixth street. In the event, of rain this field will be used for the game also.

Mr. Kasch has posted a poster on the dressing room door. Football may be a brutal game but brutes cannot play it. Courage and initiative are its first requisites.—Robert Zupke.

Owing to the fact that the N. P. field has been covered with water from the recent rains, Coach Kasch and his thundering herd have been on a barnstorming tour in the vicinity of the Paper Mill and the Sixth street mine.

On Saturday morning the boys were pleasantly surprised and transported to a pasture near the paper mill in a large truck. Upon arrival they went through their antics to the satisfaction of the coach and much to the bewilderment of several cows grazing nearby. On Monday after school the warriors, in all their armor, commanded several automobiles and rode out to the field near the deserted mine. Although slightly hampered by a summers growth of grass the practice was, all in all, very successful. In case of more rain it is possible that this field may be used for Saturday's game.

Miss Alice Regina Johnson has completed her studies in Europe and is now a member of the teaching staff in the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago.

While Donald McNamara was on his way to attend the University of California in Los Angeles the other morning, he accidentally met Howard Peterson, a classmate, who is visiting friends and relatives in southern California.

A Bit of This and That

Folks, listen! In this wonderful day and age (rainy rather) with the aeroplane, the price of pork chops over the counter, and the abominable assignments the teachers dish out, as subjects for heaped arguments, an ordinary coat rack has no place. But the last few days here at the City Hall when everything was positively all wet, coat racks have taken on an importance far beyond that of doing the wedding march step in time with Ovid's Metamorphosis.

Coat racks are a necessity—a necessity not to be pushed aside or walked on but a place, folks, on which to hang your coats. We finally got them yesterday after some fleshy person had complained about losing several ounces in pushing through the cloak hall. There are a number of them now, so please hang your coats there for they step moving with the crowd only when anchored by a capacity load. Coat racks are deaf, dumb, and blind, but you can hang anything on them except the blame for not getting here sooner. There may be many of you who don't know what a coat rack is, was, or may be. For your enlightenment, it is a combination of wood, nails, and hooks artistically and substantially attached together, covered with a varnish—sometimes. This is set in a commanding position before the entrance to a schoolroom as to make it an absolute necessity to shed your coats and other outer garments upon one of the receiving hooks in order to squeeze a perfect 36 through the space.

STRANGE HAPPENINGS MYSTIFY STUDENTS

In Miss Laipple's aquarium are to be found a Tiger Salamander, a Cray Fish, which propels itself backwards instead of forward, and several snakes. There was a frog but he mysteriously disappeared. He must have jumped out, as his escape can be accounted for in no other way.

The little horned toad is much happier in the insect cage which Ellis Holmes was so kind to make. There are also a number of caterpillars and grasshoppers in this cage. The biology classes have just begun their study of insects.

Plea of A. Book

Dear Student:

I address this plea to you since I will have to abide with you for one year or maybe two. Will you kindly heed and follow what I impart to you?

I wish to remind you that I have a very substantial back. Please do not try to strengthen it with a pencil.

I am very proud of my figure. Please, dear student, do not try to fatten me by placing papers between my leaves. So much excess weight breaks my back.

I know that you have many hard fights with your lessons but do not have the scars of battle on me.

I have no rain coat and only one suit of clothes. Will you protect me from the wrath of the winds?

I am very sociable and like company so use me often, or else I shall feel very lonesome. I will be very grateful and help you gladly.

If, dear student, you heed my cry, I promise to repay you through my best help for the dollar you paid as the fee for my services.

Very sincerely,

A. BOOK.

Latin I

As the students take their places in the Latin I classes and the door is closed from the rest of the world they are instantly swept from the age of the twentieth century, and are back among the Romans. As they discover and explore this wonderful old empire they understand immediately the need of the Latin language so that they may become better tourists and learn more of Roman arts and literature. So their first step is to discover the names of their immediate surroundings. There is much laughing and jollity as the Roman sightseers are told the names, cases, and genders of the many interesting places and things.

As they go on in this study they believe that they will feel able to converse with advanced Latin students, and give their correct opinions, properly, and in the right places.

REVIEW 1908 FOOTBALL TEAM

(Written for the Brainonian by Fred L. Sanborn, Brainerd High School Football Coach of 1908)

Unless you have been a close student of football, and have kept in touch with its many changes, it will be hard to realize just what the Brainerd high school team of 1908 actually did in bringing to Brainerd its first and only state championship.

Football at that time was a game of defensive tactics. Close line play of the old wedge, and tandem variety with its short line plunges made necessary the stressing of defensive football. The forward pass was in its inception, merely a short toss over the line. All of this tended to limit scoring possibilities and yet your team of 1908 compiled 168 points in seven games to their opponents 17.

Aitkin 0, Brainerd 14.
Little Falls 5, Brainerd 33.
Little Falls 0, Brainerd 20.
St. Cloud 0, Brainerd 0.
St. Cloud 0, Brainerd 28.
Bemidji 12, Brainerd 17.
Perham 0, Brainerd 40.

This remarkable showing is made more so when you will understand that these seven games were played without a substitution being made. The eleven men that started the season played every game and not once was anyone of them retired from play because of injury.

I regret that some of these boys did not see fit to continue their play in college football. Captain Quinn Parker, Jas. Alderman, Harry Carlson, George Mahood, Roland Barron and others were destined for big things in the field of athletics, and I could predict nothing short of an All American post for John Mahlum, late captain of Georgetown university, who lost his life during the World War before the completion of his college work.

I would be remiss in my loyalty to these boys and to the football fans of 1908 if I did not say just a word concerning the wonderful support afforded the team by the school faculty, student body and the good people of Brainerd. The entire town was behind them to a man and I can only urge that this old spirit of loyalty be revived. It means more to the boys and their coach than can be realized by the outsider. I do not hesitate in saying that more games have been won through such a loyalty that have been won by a forward pass or brilliant run.

FACULTY TO PICNIC AT ON-PA-WE LODGE

All the faculty and their wives are going out to On-Pa-We lodge, better known as O'Briens' cottage on Clearwater Lake tomorrow evening to have a picnic.

Meat loaf, creamed potatoes, combination salad, date cake with whipped cream and coffee will be served.

All will have a good time, swimming, boat riding, tennis, and such sports. Last year one of the faculty was nearly drowned at their picnic—we all sincerely hope it won't happen again, unless it is one of these hard-hearted school teachers who delights in flunking the very hard working students.

What?

It was on a Friday morning when the excitement ran so high. What was all the disturbance in the rooms? Students stopped in the middle of their recitations and gasped with surprise and delight! They had seen it before of course, but lately it had been so seldom and was now so unexpected that the effect was quite surprising.

The teachers rapped in vain for order for what was a mere teacher's order compared to this great event? I seem to have neglected to mention what caused this disturbance. I took it for granted that such a startling occurrence would not escape your notice.

Katherine Nolan of '27 and Laura McGaffigan of '28 are receiving nurses training at Rochester.

Quinn Blackburn, graduate of '17, has been selected by Commander Byrd as official topographer for the Byrd-Antarctic expedition.

Miss Zita Miller, who has been a patient at the Deerwood Sanatorium, has been discharged and has returned home.

Frank Bane of '27 is now with the Aviation Corps of the Army and will soon sail for Hawaii.

Teacher's Pets!

Hark, mates! The rumor has been tossed about that Miss Laipple has a number of pets in all of her classes. Their names, say you?

Oh! Yes! It is said that they are: Master Archibald Salamander, Mr. George Washing-machine Horned toad, John, James and Burton Grasshopper, and Misses Helen, Dorothy, Doris Butterfly, and William Snake, Jr., A Mr. Wilbur Frog, one of the culprits escaped last week and has not been seen since.

Their trial will be held all of this week. Come on in one and all and see the monsters.

Wonderful Tales Told of Monster Serpents

From time immemorial the sea serpent has figured in story and legend. Pliny, the Roman naturalist (23-79 A. D.) tells of enormous water and land serpents, some so large that whole armies were sent against them. The hardy Norse fishermen gave thrilling stories of sea monsters. Olaus Magnus, a Swedish bishop, wrote of "a very large serpent of length upward of 200 feet and 20 feet in diameter, with a row of hairs 2 feet in length hanging from the neck, sharp scales of dark color, and brilliant, flaming eyes. It attacks boats and snatches away the men by raising itself high out of the water, and devours them." Hans Egede, a Norwegian missionary to Greenland, tells of encountering, on July 6, 1734, "a very terrible sea animal, which raised itself so high above the water that its head reached above our mainmast. It had a long, sharp snout, and blew like a whale." The carfish, with a body from 25 to 30 feet long, and almost as thin as a ribbon, is believed by some naturalists to be the creature which gave rise to many remarkable yarns, told from ancient days until now, of "sea serpents." The silvery body, crossed with dusky stripes, the grotesque head and face, with enlarged fins tipped with red, waving above like a horse's mane, might well give foundation, it is said, to almost any story. Still no one can definitely say that the sea serpent does not exist.

Humming Bird Small but Famed as Fighter

A man's bravery can never be judged by his size. Frequently the midget has the spirit of a raging lion while the big, hulking 200-pounder has the timorous heart of a rabbit. The same law of nature applies to birds, Kendrick Kimball writes, in the Detroit News.

The humming bird, sometimes called the "jewel of the air" because of his flashing luster, is only three inches in length, but his courage knows no boundaries. Humming birds are fearless. They will attack a hawk, a crow or an eagle, and against such a nimble adversary the bigger bird would have no chance.

With his rapier bill, which he thrusts into flowers for their nectar, the humming bird is capable of dealing an adversary a sharp prick which would discourage further aggressiveness. Among themselves, the humming birds fight frequently. Like skilled fencers, they thrust at one another with their long, needle-like bills, ducking and darting so fast that the eye can hardly follow them as they maneuver for openings.

Here Endeth the Lesson

A thrifty Scotch farmer started off each day by reading a chapter from the Bible to his field hands. One morning during the harvesting season, he struck the sixth chapter of Chronicles, which consists of 81 verses of genealogical names. He droned on until he came to:

"And Shallum begat Hilkiah, and Hilkiah begat Azariah, and Azariah begat Seraiah, and Seraiah begat Johazadak."

Then he paused and looked over the leaf.

"Weel, my friends," he said, "they begat ane another richt down to the end o' the page and a lang way over on the ither side, so we'll jist leave them to it. Off wi' ye to yer work."

Minority Victors

Twice in the history of the country a Presidential candidate has received a majority of the popular votes and been defeated by the electoral vote. The most famous case was the disputed election of 1876 when Samuel J. Tilden received 4,234,885 votes and Hayes 4,035,950, but Hayes was declared elected. In 1888 Cleveland had 5,540,329 popular votes and Harrison 5,439,553, but Harrison was elected by 233 electoral votes to 163.

Simple Dancing Frock of Pale Blue Souffle

This dainty and simple dancing frock of pale blue souffle will appeal to all young women. The skirt is rimmed by an insert of cream-colored lace edged with blue grosgrain ribbon. The ribbon also forms a girldie at the natural waistline.

Corsets for Traveling

Are Easily Laundered

Some of the new corsets are especially useful for traveling because they are so easily laundered. One garment for evening wear is made with a silk girldie and lace top. Another girldie resembles a step-in but has a five-inch side opening, and is made of wide satin ribbon with elastic hip sections. For active sports wear there are a few new step-ins made of woven elastic, with and without side hiplacings. These lacings are only about four inches long and start at the top of the corset.

For the large figure there are new corsets with front clasps and front lacings about an inch to one side of the clasp. These corsets are fitted to extend only a short way above the normal waistline, and have extra elastic bandings over the hips to insure a smooth, continuous line from the waist to the thighs.

Brassieres and bandeaux are now to be found in many styles and materials and made to suit the requirements of evening clothes, sports costumes and daytime apparel. When an afternoon dress is worn that has a deep neckline, requiring a bit of lace, one of the new bandeaux with a plain net inset may be worn. These are made of white, flesh and ecru net and fit snugly, avoiding the trouble that ordinarily arises when separate pieces of lace are worn, which have to be either pinned or sewn in place. By wearing this type of bandeau the pin may be placed to best advantage and the neckline properly adjusted without causing an undue strain on other parts of the garment.

Under sheer frocks for either afternoon or evening the new lace brassieres are very desirable, for they fit the figure snugly and may be had without straps. Some are made of lace and crepe de chine, others entirely of lace with a net foundation.

For wear about the country club with the semisports type of dress there are new open-mesh silk stockings in pale shades. These stockings are to be had either plain or with clocks, both being equally stylish.

New Heels in Hosiery

Incline Toward Skyline

New heels in hosiery are more and more inclined toward the skyline effect. This ever-flattering and slenderized pointed heel is being almost universally adopted and is seen in quite as many variations and versions as there are manufacturers. A recent addition to this type of heel in stockings is made on a jacquard machine and shows an attractive irregular line. Whatever the style, the pointed heel gives a pleasant effect of sophisticated slimmess.

Picot top hosiery has a strong appeal to the fastidious woman. This added touch of daintiness is just one of those unimportant trifles which are sought in the new elegance of modern dress.

Happily the tender pinkness of this sweater was interrupted at intervals by stripes of gray and dull blue and the pink crepe de chine skirt was box-plaited and bordered in black. The note was repeated in the black banding about the pink sailor collar, which was pulled out over the sweater to intimate that a blouse of the pink crepe de chine was being worn under it.

REV. M. L. EVERSZ ADDRESSES THE HIGH SCHOOL ON EDUCATION

Education is Ability to Enter Into All Values With Appreciation

Rev. Morris L. Eversz, pastor of the First Methodist church, addressed the students of the high school last Friday noon.

He started in talk on how Freshmen and Sophomores should think of education by quoting several humorous definitions of it. One was said that education was something he had been exposed to but had not caught. Another said that education is the sum of all he had not been taught.

Said the ultra senior to the verdant freshman, "Do not let your studies interfere with your education."

The definition we were really to think about was this. Education is ability to enter into all values with appreciation and conviction. The word "ability" is derived from the Greek word "dynamite." Ability means something forceful. The words "to enter" mean to penetrate. "All values" mean values of art, architecture, commerce, industry, politics, government, home, religion, etc. Appreciation is made from the word praise, and conviction means to be "dead sure."

The speaker said only two things are sure in this life, mathematics and experience. Mathematics is an exact science, and we know the things we live through.

In the high school young people first learn to think. Thinking is not brooding, dreaming—thinking is creating. The emigrant Polish girl in the Americanization class said the difference between an educated man and an intelligent man was this: the educated man gets his "thinks" from other people, and the intelligent man works his own "thinks."

Rev. Eversz said he wanted us always to think of education in terms of our alma mater, the high school. The fact that people of wealth were leaving their money to private schools, colleges and universities proves that the private schools, colleges and universities make the deeper impression, whereas the Yale report for elementary education of 1925 showed that while the pupils from the high schools came to college better prepared, the pupils from the high schools did the better work. Private school boys and girls are better cared for, wear better clothes, have more money, come from more luxurious homes and have a better literary finish, but the pupils from the high schools have what is better than "finish," they have more pep, enterprise and a spirit to achieve.

Then the speaker also urged us to cooperate and gave humorous illustrations as to how to do it. The real school is the student body. Buildings, teachers, school boards, exist only for them.

He counseled us to seek happiness. Many people mistake happiness for pleasure. If they have pleasures they think they are happy. But happiness consists in being worthy, worthy of God, of the world's Redeemer, of the flag, worthy of home, school, church, religion, government, worthy of youth, etc.

The school listened so intently to Rev. Eversz' address, that few took notes and the Brainerdian is indebted to the kind pastor for the points he furnished after his address.

The School House in the City

In the school house in the city
Dwelt a little freshie boy,
He was green as grass and shamrock
And, as usual, very coy.

Was not very fond of study
And his lessons he would shirk
Tho' his teachers warned and scolded
He could not be made to work.

Of the test time, never thinking
He played hockey all he durst.
Never bore in mind, the motto,
"Always think of safety first."

Finally an examination,
Lay before his wide spread eyes,
"Why, oh why did I not think to Prepare first?" were his sad cries.

We all know the end of this boy
For it happens as a rule
They are flunked then taken hold of
And sent sadly home from school.

WANTED—Immediate Adoption
A male freshie, 13 years old, well broken to the battle, nine teeth cut, light sunset hair, without spot or blemish, no parents of any account, hard to cry, don't bite, shows signs of genius, and has been vaccinated.

The football season starts Saturday at 3:00 when Mr. Kasch's warriors open their schedule with a tilt against Milaca here. Mr. Kasch has been working the boys hard getting them into shape for the fight which he promises will be chuck full of surprises and thrills. The team is working under difficulties this year so let's all turn out and loosen up the ol' tonsils in appreciation. What say?

When the Frosh made their first appearance at the court house all the teachers were rather disappointed with them and their foolish fears but the faculty may now rest assured they are quite human. They have already adopted that custom so dear to the hearts of the underclassmen, that of using tea-lead and spitballs in connection with rubber bands. Their unerring aim and deadly precision is far above that of former classes so we have great hopes for the class of '32, but Mr. Kasch and Mrs. Fleming have the eye of Dead Eye Dick himself, so this amusement will no doubt be short lived.

The Hi-Y Service Shield was hung up in the court house assembly Monday night to remind the lower classes of the bigger things in life. The Hi-Y club each year votes on the Senior boy who has done the most for the school and community. Some of the Freshmen boys have already started working for the tag reserved for the class of '32. We wish them luck.

An "Owed" to Our Principal

Sing Hey for the Head of the B. H. S.

It's "Tornie"
Our "One and Only"—we profess
Our "Tornie"
Her proper nomenclature's long,
It doesn't adapt itself to song,
And so we call her—we mean no wrong
Just "Tornie."

When the path of a Freshman is sore beset
And thorny
When it looks so lonesome and dark
And too
Forlornly,—
There's one will set the twists all straight
And "boost" that poor Freshie early
And late
His friend to depend upon, sure as Fate,
It's "Tornie."

One night our old school went up in smoke—
Watch Tornie!
Right thro' the crowd and confusion
She broke
Did "Tornie."
Her first thought, as always, for us
Poor dears
She saved our marks, in spite of our fears,
And started us out on time—Three cheers
For "Tornie!"

For four long years, we've kept a watch
On "Tornie."
We'll tell the world—there is no match,
For "Tornie."

She sticks to her post till the dumb thing cracks,
For kind help and wise guidance
Not one of us lacks—
And every last one of us heartily backs
Dear "Tornie."

Annual Faculty Tea Given for New Members

A "get acquainted" tea was given Thursday afternoon, September 13, at the City Hall, in honor of the new high school faculty members. Miss Mary Tornstrom, Miss Corna Stickney, Mrs. Warren Kasch, Miss Hildegard Erstad, Miss Doris Taylor, Miss Aline Ruthe, Miss Emma Brattvold, Miss Evelyn Olson, and Frederic Elden entertained.

New members of the force being entertained were: Miss Anna Lord, Miss Dorothy White, Miss Osa Hornland, Miss Winifred Spencer, Miss Aletha Herwig, Miss Minnie Haug, and Roy L. LaMeter.

Among those who are attending St. Mary's in Duluth are: Hazel Coenan, Rose Koering and Martha Remmels.

Education

Teacher: Class in Botany stand up. What kind of a bird is a heron?
Pupil: A heron is a small fish, as full of bones as a fine tooth comb.
Teacher: To what genus does the cat belong?
Pupil: The musical genus, they lie around days, and shout around nights.

Teacher: Which is the wisest fowl?
Pupil: The owl, because he hoots at most things.

Teacher: Class in Botany, sit down!

In Latin Vocabulary—Mulier, mulieris.—woman.
Now we see where we get our word "mule."

TWO '28 GRADUATES WIN SCHOLARSHIPS

The scholarships offered last June by the various colleges of Minnesota were awarded during the summer, of the number examined, over five hundred were considered for the scholarships. Brainerd has reason to be exceedingly proud of her part in these examinations, for, as last year, she received two. Donald McNamara, president of the class, ranked number 15 in scholarship, but did not accept the offer as he is attending the University in Los Angeles, Calif. Margaret Dillan, who ranked 34 from the top, is a freshman at Gustavus Adolphus college at St. Peter, Minn. The scholarship, in addition to the honor it brings, carries a cash value of $100 on the tuition at the college attended.

GRIDIRON GOSSIP

The B. H. S. football team received the first setback of the season last week, when it was learned that Fox, a letterman from last year, would be ineligible for the remainder of the semester because of failing to make three subjects last semester. Fox had practically cinched the center position and owing to his size and weight together with his experience, his place in the line will be hard to fill. Haultala has been shifted to center and Foster although usually seen at guard can be called upon to fill the berth in the center of the line.

Coach Kasch is fast rounding the team into shape and this week will be spent perfecting plays and producing a smooth running team to battle with the Milaca eleven, Saturday, here.

Last week, on account of the bad weather, some time was lost for outside practice but on these days chalk talks were substituted and much valuable information was imparted to the players by the coach. The possibility of rain before the Milaca game and the consequent spoiling of the field for play is a problem at present. Mr. Kasch and Mr. Cobb spent yesterday morning looking for a suitable one for practice, and decided on the old baseball diamond on South Sixth street. In the event of rain this field will be used for the game also.

Mr. Kasch has posted a poster on the dressing room door. Football may be a brutal game but brutes cannot play it. Courage and initiative are its first requisites.—Robert Zupke.

Owing to the fact that the N. P. field has been covered with water from the recent rains, Coach Kasch and his thundering herd have been on a barnstorming tour in the vicinity of the Paper Mill and the Sixth street mine.

On Saturday morning the boys were pleasantly surprised and transported to a pasture near the paper mill in a large truck. Upon arrival they went through their antics to the satisfaction of the coach and much to the bewilderment of several cows grazing nearby. On Monday after school the warriors, in all their armor, commanded several automobiles and rode out to the field near the deserted mine. Although slightly hampered by a summers growth of grass the practice was, all in all, very successful. In case of more rain it is possible that this field may be used for Saturday's game.

Miss Alice Regina Johnson has completed her studies in Europe and is now a member of the teaching staff in the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago.

While Donald McNamara was on his way to attend the University of California in Los Angeles the other morning, he accidentally met Howard Peterson, a classmate, who is visiting friends and relatives in southern California.

A Bit of This and That

Folks, listen! In this wonderful day and age (rainy rather) with the aeroplane, the price of pork chops over the counter, and the abominable assignments the teachers dish out, as subjects for heaped arguments, an ordinary coat rack has no place. But the last few days here at the City Hall when everything was positively all wet, coat racks have taken on an importance far beyond that of doing the wedding march step in time with Ovid's Metamorphosis.

Coat racks are a necessity—a necessity not to be pushed aside or walked on but a place, folks, on which to hang your coats. We finally got them yesterday after some fleshy person had complained about losing several ounces in pushing through the cloak hall. There are a number of them now, so please hang your coats there for they stop moving with the crowd only when anchored by a capacity load. Coat racks are deaf, dumb, and blind, but you can hang anything on them except the blame for not getting here sooner. There may be many of you who don't know what a coat rack is, was, or may be. For your enlightenment, it is a combination of wood, nails, and hooks artistically and substantially attached together, covered with a varnish—sometimes. This is set in a commanding position before the entrance to a schoolroom as to make it an absolute necessity to shed your coats and other outer garments upon one of the receiving hooks in order to squeeze a perfect 36 through the space.

STRANGE HAPPENINGS MYSTIFY STUDENTS

In Miss Laipple's aquarium are to be found a Tiger Salamander, a Cray Fish, which propels itself backwards instead of forward, and several snakes. There was a frog but he mysteriously disappeared. He must have jumped out, as his escape can be accounted for in no other way. The little horned toad is much happier in the insect cage which Ellis Holmes was so kind to make. There are also a number of caterpillars and grasshoppers in this cage. The biology classes have just begun their study of insects.

Plea of A. Book

Dear Student:
I address this plea to you since I will have to abide with you for one year or maybe two. Will you kindly heed and follow what I impart to you?
I wish to remind you that I have a very substantial back. Please do not try to strengthen it with a pencil.

I am very proud of my figure. Please, dear student, do not try to fatten me by placing papers between my leaves. So much excess weight breaks my back.

I know that you have many hard fights with your lessons but do not have the scars of battle on me.

I have no rain coat and only one suit of clothes. Will you protect me from the wrath of the winds?

I am very sociable and like company so use me often, or else I shall feel very lonesome. I will be very grateful and help you gladly.

If, dear student, you heed my cry, I promise to repay you through my best help for the dollar you paid as the fee for my services.

Very sincerely,

A. BOOK.

Latin I

As the students take their places in the Latin I classes and the door is closed from the rest of the world they are instantly swept from the age of the twentieth century, and are back among the Romans. As they discover and explore this wonderful old empire they understand immediately the need of the Latin language, so that they may become better tourists and learn more of Roman arts and literature. So their first step is to discover the names of their immediate surroundings. There is much laughing and jollity as the Roman sightseers are told the names, cases, and genders of the many interesting places and things. As they go on in this study they believe that they will feel able to converse with advanced Latin students, and give their correct opinions, properly, and in the right places.

REVIEW 1908 FOOTBALL TEAM

(Written for the Brainerdian by Fred L. Sanborn, Brainerd High School Football Coach of 1908)

Unless you have been a close student of football, and have kept in touch with its many changes, it will be hard to realize just what the Brainerd high school team of 1908 actually did in bringing to Brainerd its first and only state championship.

Football at that time was a game of defensive tactics. Close line play of the old wedge, and tandem variety with its short line plunges made necessary the stressing of defensive football. The forward pass was in its inception, merely a short toss over the line. All of this tended to limit scoring possibilities and yet your team of 1908 compiled 168 points in seven games to their opponents 17.

Aitkin 0, Brainerd 14.
Aitkin 0, Brainerd 44.
Little Falls 5, Brainerd 33.
Little Falls 0, Brainerd 20.
St. Cloud 0, Brainerd 0.
St. Cloud 0, Brainerd 28.
Bemidji 12, Brainerd 17.
Perham 0, Brainerd 40.

This remarkable showing is made more so when you will understand that these seven games were played without a substitution being made. The eleven men that started the season played every game and not once was anyone of them retired from play because of injury.

I regret that some of these boys did not see fit to continue their play in college football. Captain Quinn Parker, Jas. Alderman, Harry Carlson, George Mahood, Roland Barron and others were destined for big things in the field of athletics, and I could predict nothing short of an All American post for John Mahlum, late captain of Georgetown university, who lost his life during the World War before the completion of his college work.

I would be remiss in my loyalty to these boys and to the football fans of 1908 if I did not say just a word concerning the wonderful support afforded the team by the school faculty, student body and the good people of Brainerd. The entire town was behind them to a man and I can only urge that this old spirit of loyalty be revived. It means more to the boys and their coach than can be realized by the outsider. I do not hesitate in saying that more games have been won through such a loyalty that have been won by a forward pass or brilliant run.

FACULTY TO PICNIC AT ON-PA-WE LODGE

All the faculty and their wives are going out to On-Pa-We lodge, better known as O'Brien's cottage on Clearwater Lake tomorrow evening to have a picnic.

Meat loaf, creamed potatoes, combination salad, date cake with whipped cream and coffee will be served.

All will have a good time, swimming, boat riding, tennis, and such sports. Last year one of the faculty was nearly drowned at their picnic—we all sincerely hope it won't happen again, unless it is one of these hard-hearted school teachers who delights in flunking the very hard working students.

What?

It was on a Friday morning when the excitement ran so high. What was all the disturbance in the rooms? Students stopped in the middle of their recitations and gasped with surprise and delight! They had seen it before of course, but lately it had been so seldom and was now so unexpected that the effect was quite surprising.

The teachers rapped in vain for order for what was a mere teacher's order compared to this great event?

I seem to have neglected to mention what caused this disturbance. I took it for granted that such a startling occurrence would not escape your notice.

Zoo is Growing

Arthur Hedlund was given the position of caretaker for our aquarium in Miss Laipple's room. Many interesting specimens have been brought, so that there will soon be a full fledged zoo.

Harold Skarolid and Carol Hoffman left recently to enroll at the University of Minnesota.

Dorothy Deering of the alumni of '27 is continuing her studies at Ancker hospital in St. Paul.

ALUMNI

Katherine Nolan of '27 and Laura McGaffigan of '28 are receiving nurses training at Rochester.

Quinn Blackburn, graduate of '17, has been selected by Commander Byrd as official topographer for the Byrd-Antarctic expedition.

Miss Zita Miller, who has been a patient at the Deerwood Sanatorium, has been discharged and has returned home.

Frank Bane of '27 is now with the Aviation Corps of the Army and will soon sail for Hawaii.

Teacher's Pets!

Hark, mates! The rumor has been tossed about that Miss Laipple has a number of pets in all of her classes. Their names, say you?

Oh! Yes! It is said that they are: Master Archibald Salamander, Mr. George Washing-machine Horned toad, John, James and Burton Grasshopper, and Misses Helen, Dorothy, Doris Butterfly, and William Snake, Jr. A Mr. Wilbur Frog, one of the culprits escaped last week and has not been seen since.

Their trial will be held all of this week. Come on in one and all and see the monsters.

Wonderful Tales Told of Monster Serpents

From time immemorial the sea serpent has figured in story and legend. Pliny, the Roman naturalist (23-79 A. D.) tells of enormous water and land serpents, some so large that whole armies were sent against them. The hardy Norse fishermen gave thrilling stories of sea monsters. Olaus Magnus, a Swedish bishop, wrote of "a very large serpent of length upward of 200 feet and 20 feet in diameter, with a row of hairs 2 feet in length hanging from the neck, sharp scales of dark color, and brilliant, flaming eyes. It attacks boats and snatches away the men by raising itself high out of the water, and devours them." Hans Egede, a Norwegian missionary to Greenland, tells of encountering, on July 6, 1734, "a very terrible sea animal, which raised itself so high above the water that its head reached above our mainmast. It had a long, sharp snout, and blew like a whale." The orfish, with a body from 25 to 30 feet long, and almost as thin as a ribbon, is believed by some naturalists to be the creature which gave rise to many remarkable yarns, told from ancient days until now, of "sea serpents." The silvery body, crossed with dusky stripes, the grotesque head and face, with enlarged fins tipped with red, waving above like a horse's mane, might well give foundation, it is said, to almost any story. Still no one can definitely say that the sea serpent does not exist.

Here Endeth the Lesson

A thrifty Scotch farmer started off each day by reading a chapter from the Bible to his field hands. One morning during the harvesting season, he struck the sixth chapter of Chronicles, which consists of 51 verses of genealogical names. He droned on until he came to:

"And Shallum begat Hilkiah, and Hilkiah begat Azariah, and Azariah begat Seraiah, and Seraiah begat Johoazak."

Then he paused and looked over the leaf.

"Weel, my friends," he said, "they begat one another right down to the end of the page and a lang way over on the ither side, so we'll jist leave them to it. Off wi' ye to yer work."—Boston Transcript.

In 1888 Cleveland had 5,540,329 popular votes and Harrison 5,439,533, but Harrison was elected by 233 electoral votes to 163.

RAIN, SEWER, STREET DAMAGE CONSIDERED

Council Votes to Relay 14th Street
Sewer, Improve Cemetery Hill
and Municipal Field

SEWER PETITION GRANTED

The city council last evening went about to correct some of the damage caused to Brainerd streets and sewers through the recent heavy rainfalls by empowering City Engineer R. T. Campbell to proceed with repairs to the 14th street sewer north of Oak street, make a careful survey and estimate of the cost of putting a permanent surface to the cemetery hill, and improvement to the municipal field site by the hauling of 200 yards of dirt.

In the face of these improvements the council was presented with a letter from R. Hanski who asked $282 damage to the basement of his establishment by flooding in which he claims payment of damages based on the contention that improper sewerage caused the flooding. The matter was referred to the city engineer and street and sewer committee with power to act on motion of Aldermen Martin Anderson and C. G. Holmstrom.

City Engineer Campbell reported that the rains had played havoc with some of the sewers in the city. One in particular that was affected more than others was that on 14th street north of Oak street. He reported that on digging he had found the pipes in a disjointed condition and that at the present time only a small passage was provided for the sewerage water to seep through. He advised that quick action be taken on the matter in order to have the sewer replaced before the frost sets in. In this respect he was given power to put in a 12 or 15 inch sewer as he may see fit. He estimated off hand that approximately 250 feet of sewer, double strength would be necessary, the repair work to cost in the neighborhood of $600.

To improve the conditions of the municipal field which for a few days following the heavy rains resembled more a lake than a field, the city engineer suggested that dirt be hauled from nearby basement excavations. He reported that he was in the position to secure dirt at the reasonable rate of 15 cents per yard.

With the cemetery hill road replaced in a fair shape, the rains had practically wiped out all traces of improvement until now it was in a deplorable condition sadly in need of repairs, City Engineer Campbell reported.

The hill has caused considerable trouble to the city council in that in spite of what improvements have already been made to it to put it in passable condition it has reverted back to its former condition.

While the cost of paving the street would be considerable, members of the council were of the opinion that paving would solve the condition of the road.

Desiring to put the road in shape so that it may remain in favorable condition, the council requested the city engineer to present at the next meeting an estimate of the cost of paving or in lieu of this expense of placing the road in permanent shape.

It was also suggested that with the trouble experienced with the hill, the road might be blocked to traffic but this was decided against when opposition voiced the sentiment of the residents in that section that the road was used constantly by people going to Northeast Brainerd.

Sewer Bid Let

Sherlund Co. were successful bidders for the sewer installation work on Terrace avenue. The company submitted a bid of $891 for the installation of 540 lineal feet of sewer. One other bid was received, that of DeRosier and Magnan who tendered a bid of $1137.

Petition For Sewer

Property owners on Pine street between South Fourth and South Fifth streets petitioned the council to construct an 8 inch sanitary sewer beginning at the manhole in the center of the intersection of South Fifth streets and extending west along the center line of Pine street, a distance of 290 feet. City Engineer Campbell was instructed to advertise for bids for the work after he had submitted an estimate that the work would cost approximately $2 a lineal foot.

Act On Car Purchase

Action on purchase of a new car for the city and school nurse, Miss Eula Michael, was referred to the purchasing committee with power to act. The committee will confer with a similar committee appointed by the Board of Education with each department meeting half the expenses of the car purchase price.

Syreen Brothers Ask License

Syreen Brothers last evening presented an application for a license to operate four gasoline pumps at a service station to be constructed on the northeast corner of Oak and South Sixth streets, the lots recently purchased from the Board of Education for $11,500. A check for $100 was tendered for the license, $25 for each pump. The license was ordered granted subject to the approval of the city engineer.

Mr. Syreen stated to the Dispatch following his application for the license that it was the intention of the company to start construction work on the service station this fall in order to complete the station and have it in readiness for operation next spring. A $40,000 service station is planned with the view in mind of expanding the prospect into a business block within a year. Tentative plans call for the expenditure of $100,000 at the location.

The results of a new technique in motion picture production will be seen in "Street Angel," the big successful Fox Film, featuring Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell. It is the use of a visual script instead of a written one. Harry Oliver, technical assistant to Borzage, conceived the idea of making crayon sketches of all the important dramatic episodes in the story, showing not only the type of sets required, but the location of the camera and the composition, or general effect of the scene.

"Street Angel," which was directed by Frank Borzage, the man who made "7th Heaven," comes to the Lyceum theatre on Wednesday for three days.

RAIN, SEWER, STREET DAMAGE CONSIDERED

Council Votes to Relay 14th Street
Sewer, Improve Cemetery Hill
and Municipal Field

SEWER PETITION GRANTED

Syreen Brothers Apply for License

Pumps

The city council last evening went about to correct some of the damage caused to Brainerd streets and sewers through the recent heavy rainfalls by empowering City Engineer R. T. Campbell to proceed with repairs to the 14th street sewer north of Oak street, make a careful survey and estimate of the cost of putting a permanent surface to the cemetery hill, and improvement to the municipal field site by the hauling of 200 yards of dirt.

In the face of these improvements the council was presented with a letter from R. Hanski who asked $282 damage to the basement of his establishment by flooding in which he claims payment of damages based on the contention that improper sewerage caused the flooding. The matter was referred to the city engineer and street and sewer committee with power to act on motion of Aldermen Martin Anderson and C. G. Holmstrom.

City Engineer Campbell reported that the rains had played havoc with some of the sewers in the city. One in particular that was affected more than others was that on 14th street north of Oak street. He reported that on digging he had found the pipes in a disjointed condition and that at the present time only a small passage was provided for the sewerage water to seep through. Broadway Love

by Thomas Edgewood

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JANET WILDE is the young and pretty daughter of Fenimore Wilde, one of Broadway's favorite actors. His son Frank is an idler and, like his father, a spendthrift. The girl has a hard time mothering them both. On the eve of a great opening night for her father, Janet accepts the proposal of Gordon Pryor, a young but impecunious actor. In a restaurant she meets a young musician, Leonard Quigg, who attracts her. Janet's father drops dead after a brilliant performance, leaving her and her brother almost penniless. Gordon Pryor breaks his engagement and Janet realizes that it was her father's prestige and not love for her that prompted his proposal. She obtains the position of confidential secretary to John Montague, theatrical impresario. At the same time she quarrels with Leonard Quigg and he leaves her one evening, in a fury. On New Year's Eve she accepts an invitation from David Churchill, a brilliant young doctor, who is secretly in love with her. He is married and makes her promise she will come to him for help in time of need.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XVI.

TWO weeks went by uneventfully for Janet, and then came that evening when she dined with her employer.

"I have to make up my mind about Wyndham Stonor's play," John Montague said. "I think I will dictate to you my reactions, and then we'll come to a show-down tomorrow afternoon."

"That means that you will work late?" Janet asked.

He looked quickly at her, as he replied: "Yes—tell you what we'd better do. You dine with me—upstairs. I have an apartment up there, although I don't live in it all the time. But I can't work if I go out—it distracts me."

"Let's go up and dine. Take the papers with you. There's a typewriter upstairs."

Janet followed him into the tiny private elevator which he worked himself. They went upstairs, where a Japanese servant received them.

"You can serve dinner, too," Montague ordered. "Give me a cocktail, but Miss Wilde won't have one. She doesn't know what's good for her."

They left the dining-room, and entered a curiously-furnished apartment. It was done in Chinese reds and blues, and the walls were hung with silk.

"Are you ready to begin work?" Janet asked, feeling that she did not like that room, with its heavy oriental atmosphere.

"Oh, don't be in a rush, Janet," he replied, and Janet noticed that for the first time he had called her by her first name. "A man can't work all his life. Besides, I want to talk to you."

"Yes?" Janet asked, and something warned her to be on guard. "You're a fool, Janet—I hope you know that much?"

"Thank you, Mr. Montague," Janet said politely.

"John—to you."

"What's in a name?" Janet asked. "It's the same thing to me if I call you 'John' or 'Mr. Montague'—or anything else. Still, the difference in our age alone seems to point to the more conventional 'Mr. Montague'."

"I started by saying that you were a fool," Montague continued. "Why this complex against going on the stage?"

"I don't want to act," Janet said positively.

"Acting has little to do with it, with me," and he grinned at her.

"I can take any pretty girl of average intelligence, and if she will do as I tell her, and not commit the fatal error of thinking for herself, I can turn her into an acceptable star. I did it with Lucille Rhodes, and I did it with a dozen others. I can do it with you. What's the matter with you? Don't you see any lure in fame? Doesn't it appeal to you?"

"It isn't what I want to do," Janet replied. "Besides, why should you want to do it for me?"

"You're a very beautiful girl," he said in a low voice.

"I don't see what that has to do with it."

"It is just possible that you may have heard—once or twice—of men doing things for girls who are very beautiful. Strange, isn't it?" And Montague smiled.

Janet made no reply.

"I don't expect you to be interested in me," his rasping voice went on. "I do expect you to be interested in what I have to offer. I offer you—stardom, within two years, and I will cover the steps of the ladder with velvet as you climb."

"What language do you understand?" Janet flashed at him. "I don't want to be a star! I don't want to go on the stage!"

"Offer No. 1 refused!" he replied. "Offer No. 2: I have found that most people, irrespective of age or sex, are very interested in money. You are young and beautiful, as I pointed out before. You are working for $50 a week, which does not give you much money for the things that are dear to a girl—clothes, cars, furs, a country place. It seems to me that were someone to settle a large sum of money on you, then you would be interested. I believe that at my age a man should be frank."

"You are offering me money, Mr. Montague? And for what?"

"Don't be an ostrich, Janet, my dear! Why do men offer to make settlements? Why did I make various beautiful young women stars of the theatrical firmament? Why? Now, don't be innocent, and don't go upstage!"

"You've done a whole lot of talking, John Montague," Janet said quietly. "I think it's my turn. You have mentioned once or twice that because I don't drink, I am old-fashioned. As a matter of fact, I am intensely modern. Otherwise, I should be very angry with you. But the modern girl can hear the kind of thing you've said tonight without anger, because she understands the world. It may be difficult for her, when she contemplates men, to keep a little contempt out of her heart. I am not taking the attitude of the old-fashioned girl and pulling any 'Sir, you insult me!' But I don't want to be made a star, even if I don't have to pay for it. And I don't want a settlement at the price you so kindly suggest. Is that clear?"

He smiled. "I must apologize, I suppose, because any time that a man makes a perfectly business-like proposal to a girl and gets refused, convention demands that he apologize."

"Your apology doesn't interest me in the least," Janet went on quietly. "I wish you hadn't said what you have said to me, as I shall never like you as much as I did before. And I don't want to lose my job, because I am interested in it, and I want to learn what I can of the production end of the theatre."

"You haven't lost your job," he announced. "If you want to forget this evening, and this evening's conversation, I will banish it from my mind. But don't be too hard on me. Put yourself in my shoes. If you can! Can you picture what it is to be John Montague? Have I not been encouraged by your sex to believe that most girls are interested in what I have to give? Let that calm down your feeling for me, and if you want to forget it, I will."

"And you won't refer to this again—I mean, to what you have said tonight? Modern as I am, Mr. Montague, I really wouldn't want those offers to be repeated. That must be a firm agreement between us, or I must hustle myself another job."

"It's agreed—although I won't swear to it," he said with a laugh. "No man can ever truthfully promise just how he will behave. But I think I shall be able to suppress the fact that I find you—not wholly unattractive, Janet! I have seen homelier girls than you. Really, I have."

"Then I'm to let you laugh your way out of it," Janet said slowly. "but I do want to point out that if you want me to quit, you only have to hint again at what you have offered tonight. And now, do you want to work—or not?"

"Parts of me are human," Montague said, as he rose. "I think it would be a strain to work tonight after what has occurred. You go home, and when you come tomorrow we will pretend that tonight never happened. I feel inclined, instead, to sit here alone and forget my disappointment in drink."

He walked with her to the elevator, and showed her how to work it.

"I think you're rather a nice person," he said as Janet stepped in and he closed the door after her.

Broadway Love

by Thomas Edgewood

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JANET WILDE is the young and pretty daughter of Fenimore Wilde, one of Broadway's favorite actors. His son Frank is an idler and, like his father, a spendthrift. The girl has a hard time mothering them both. On the eve of a great opening night for her father, Janet accepts the proposal of Gordon Pryor, a young but impecunious actor. In a restaurant she meets a young musician, Leonard Quigg, who attracts her. Janet's father drops dead after a brilliant performance, leaving her and her brother almost penniless. Gordon Pryor breaks his engagement and Janet realizes that it was her father's prestige and not love for her that prompted his proposal. She obtains the position of confidential secretary to John Montague, theatrical impresario. At the same time she quarrels with Leonard Quigg and he leaves her one evening, in a fury. On New Year's Eve she accepts an invitation from David Churchill, a brilliant young doctor, who is secretly in love with her. He is married and makes her promise she will come to him for help in time of need.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XVI.

TWO weeks went by uneventfully for Janet, and then came that evening when she dined with her employer.

"I have to make up my mind about Wyndham Stonor's play," John Montague said. "I think I will dictate to you my reactions, and then we'll come to a show-down tomorrow afternoon."

"That means that you will work late?" Janet asked.

He looked quickly at her, as he replied: "Yes—tell you what we'd better do. You dine with me—upstairs. I have an apartment up there, although I don't live in it all the time. But I can't work if I go out—it distracts me."

"Let's go up and dine. Take the papers with you. There's a typewriter upstairs."

Janet followed him into the tiny private elevator which he worked himself. They went upstairs, where a Japanese servant received them.

"You can serve dinner, too," Montague ordered. "Give me a cocktail, but Miss Wilde won't have one. She doesn't know what's good for her."

They left the dining-room, and entered a curiously-furnished apartment. It was done in Chinese reds and blues, and the walls were hung with silk.

"Are you ready to begin work?" Janet asked, feeling that she did not like that room, with its heavy oriental atmosphere.

"Oh, don't be in a rush, Janet," he replied, and Janet noticed that for the first time he had called her by her first name. "A man can't work all his life. Besides, I want to talk to you."

"Yes?" Janet asked, and something warned her to be on guard. "You're a fool, Janet—I hope you know that much?"

"Thank you, Mr. Montague," Janet said politely.

"John—to you." "What's in a name?" Janet fenced with him. "It's the same thing to me if I call you 'John' or 'Mr. Montague'—or anything else. Still, the difference in our age alone seems to point to the more conventional 'Mr. Montague'."

"I started by saying that you were a fool," Montague continued. "Why this complex against going on the stage?"

"I don't want to act," Janet said positively. "Acting has little to do with me," and he grinned at her.

"I can take any pretty girl of average intelligence, and if she will do as I tell her, and not commit the fatal error of thinking for herself, I can turn her into an acceptable star. I did it with Lucille Rhodes, and I did it with half a dozen others. I can do it with you. What's the matter with you? Don't you see any lure in fame? Doesn't it appeal to you?"

"It isn't what I want to do," Janet replied. "Besides, why should you want to do it for me?" "You're a very beautiful girl," he said in a low voice.

"I don't see what that has to do with it!"

"It is just possible that you may have heard—once or twice—of men doing things for girls who are very beautiful. Strange, isn't it?" And Montague smiled.

Janet made no reply.

"I don't expect you to be interested in me," his rasping voice went on. "I do expect you to be interested in what I have to offer. I offer you—stardom, within two years, and I will cover the steps of the ladder with velvet as you climb."

"What language do you understand?" Janet flashed at him. "I don't want to be a star! I don't want to go on the stage!"

"Offer No. 1 refused!" he replied. "Offer No. 2: I have found that most people, irrespective of age or sex, are very interested in money. You are young and beautiful, as I pointed out before. You are working for $50 a week, which does not give you much money for the things that are dear to a girl—clothes, cars, furs, a country place. It seems to me that we can settle a large sum of money on you, then you would be interested. I believe that at my age a man should be frank."

"You are offering me money, Mr. Montague? And for what?" "Don't be an ostrich, Janet, my dear! Why do men offer to make settlements? Why did I make various beautiful young women stars of the theatrical firmament? Why? Now, don't be innocent, and don't go upstage!"

"You've done a whole lot of talking, John Montague," Janet said quietly. "I think it's my turn. You have mentioned once or twice that because I don't drink, I am old-fashioned. As a matter of fact, I am intensely modern. Otherwise, I should be very angry with you. But the modern girl can hear the kind of thing you've said tonight without anger, because she understands the world. It may be difficult for her, when she contemplates men, to keep a little contempt out of her heart. I am not taking the attitude of the old-fashioned girl and pulling any 'Sir, you insult me!' But I don't want to be made a star, even if I don't have to pay for it. And I don't want a settlement at the price you so kindly suggest. Is that clear?"

He smiled. "I must apologize, I suppose, because any time that a man makes a perfectly business-like proposal to a girl and gets refused, convention demands that he apologize."

"Your apology doesn't interest me in the least," Janet went on quietly. "I wish you hadn't said what you have said to me, as I shall never like you as much as I did before. And I don't want to lose my job, because I am interested in it, and I want to learn what I can of the production end of the theatre."

"You haven't lost your job," he announced. "If you want to forget this evening, and this evening's conversation, I will banish it from my mind. But don't be too hard on me. Put yourself in my shoes. If you can! Can you picture what it is to be John Montague? Have I not been encouraged by your sex to believe that most girls are interested in what I have to give? Let that calm down your feeling for me, and if you want to forget it, I will."

"And you won't refer to this again—I mean, to what you have said tonight? Modern as I am, Mr. Montague, I really wouldn't want those offers to be repeated. That must be a firm agreement between us, or I must hustle myself another job."

"It's agreed—although I won't swear to it," he said with a laugh. "No man can ever truthfully promise just how he will behave. But I think I shall be able to suppress the fact that I find you—not wholly unattractive, Janet! I have seen homelier girls than you. Really, I have."

"Then I'm to let you laugh your way out of it," Janet said slowly. "But I do want to point out that if you want me to quit, you only have to hint again at what you have offered tonight. And now, do you want to work—or not?"

"Parts of me are human," Montague said, as he rose. "I think it would be a strain to work tonight after what has occurred. You go home, and when you come tomorrow we will pretend that tonight never happened. I feel inclined, instead, to sit here alone and forget my disappointment in drink."

He walked with her to the elevator, and showed her how to work it.

"I think you're rather a nice person," he said as Janet stepped in and he closed the door after her.
